Abstract

This final thesis deals with economic and financial awareness of teachers and its impact on management and management of kindergartens. The work consists of two parts - theoretical and practical. The first chapter of this part describes the theoretical aspects of school management and presents the function of schools. The second chapter presents the legal requirements for school management and school director. In the third chapter, we meet with the specifics of school management and the principles of the management cycle. The fourth chapter presents an overview of the management and funding of schools and financial management issues. The practical part of thesis consists of one main chapter, which deals with issues such as financial and economic awareness and perception of teachers as directors of kindergartens. Final aim of this work is to find out where their ranges of financial and economic awareness and how does it affect the management and management of nursery schools, and whether teachers with lower financial literacy are able to educate in this area.
